DIED

Mrs. John Woolery.

Mrs. John Woolery of Otterville, wife of a farmer living north of Otterville, died Monday at a hospital in Fulton, following an illness of about a month.

Mrs. Woolery was about fifty years old and is survived besides her husband by four children.

Mrs. George T. Brown.

Mrs. George T. Brown, widow of a former conductor on the Missouri Pacific and later joint owner with Charles Pratt of the Garrison House, located where the Missouri Pacific station now stands, died Monday at her home in Mokane, Mo. where she had resided since leaving Sedalia many years ago. Mr. Brown died at Mokane a few months ago.

Mrs. Brown was a niece of the late James Eads, builder of Eads bridge, St. Louis. She is survived by one son, Warder Brown, who conducts the M., K. & T. dining station at Mokane, and who formerly was in charge of the Katy lunch room here.

Funeral services will be conducted by Dr. George L. Barnes, Episcopal minister, at Portland on Wednesday.

Mrs. E. E. Hanna, wife of the M., K. & T. superintendent, left Tuesday for Mokane and will attend the funeral.
