believe are appeals. The suspensions lasted 4-10 days.

Board members decided to postpone the hearing because they had not received the results of a chemical analysis on the pills the student allegedly sold, Jones said.

In the meantime, the student will remain suspended from school. Jones said Monday he had placed the student on a 90-day suspension, which began the same day as the 10-day suspension imposed by Smith-Cotton Principal Morris Byrum.

At the hearing, the board also will consider the parents' appeal of the long term suspension.

According to school policy, the parents have requested the suspension be delayed until after the hearing, Jones said.

But Jones denied the request "because of the seriousness of the situation and because of the impact (the student's return to school) will have on the rest of the students."

Jones noted that the alleged offense involved not only the juvenile but other Smith-Cotton students.

Colby, who headed the Central Intelligence Agency during the Nixon and Ford Administrations, said he expected no significant change in Soviet policy with Andropov in charge, Le Quotidien of Paris reported.

He described Andropov, who succeeded Brezhnev as party leader last month, as a tough person who believes in discipline and has unshakable faith in what he is doing, the daily said.

Colby was quoted as saying it was too soon to say if Andropov will remain the boss. "Let's wait a few years for that, when the real leader of the U.S.S.R. emerges from the struggle among all the pretenders."

The newspaper said Colby speculated that Andropov might consolidate his power, "but if I were you I'd pay more attention to local chiefs, (Viktor) Grishin in Moscow, (Gregory) Romanov in Leningrad."

Colby also was quoted as saying
